

I have grave concern over the Broadband over Power Line issue. I have had less than satisfactory results in working with power distribution companies in the past with interference issues. Getting the attention of the right person with a complaint has not been easy. Then getting the problem resolved was an uphill battle, often only being cleared after threatening to file complaints with the FCC. That was with standard transmission problems. What will we face with the broadband technology? Jim Seals KB5XN